

THE HOUSE WARMING UP.

The tactics resorted to by the gold bugs to stifle action on the bill on Thursday, caused but discussion in the House.

Reed is using his position as Speaker to hamper the cause of silver legislation and now the California representatives who voted for him as Speaker in the caucus must begin to realize their shortsightedness, especially when they are receiving telegrams from their constituents to vote solidly for silver.

The gold men in Congress are making a desperate fight for their owners in Wall street and nothing will be left undone in the way of slippery tactics to hamper the work of undoing the swindle of '73.

From present appearances the show for the passage of the silver bill is excellent. Several members sided with Reed on a question of Parliamentary usage who are for silver, and at present we have a clear majority in the House.

Nothing but the out-right purchase of votes by Wall street can beat the West if the bill reaches a vote.

The gold men realize that they lack the strength in the House to beat the bill and from this on nothing but guerrilla tactics will be resorted to.

Henry Clews & Co., the New York bankers, have sent circulars over the country stating, that in their opinion, if the provision of the Bland bill to coin silver up to $4,000,000 per month had been carried out, the present outcry for new silver legislation by Congress would not have arisen. They state that "the interest of the great merchants in London, whose business is in the East, always favors a low-price for silver bullion, and their efforts have been to depress the price. London has now lost the power of dictation to the silver market, and this country, which is entitled to it has assumed it. If the present silver bill passes, the power of dictation will remain here, and London will adopt and follow our figures. They see no reason why silver should not reach the value it had previous to its demonetization in 1873." The opinions of such men are entitled to credit and their arguments advanced are indisputable. All the troubles which were to occur when the Bland bill was passed in 1876 have proved ephemeral, and gold, instead of being driven out of the country by the silver money, has steadily flowed in, occasioned by the increased exports consequent on lower rates of interest, on account of an increase in the volume of currency. If the Free Coinage bill should become a law, all those who aided in its passage will receive the plaudits of a grateful people.

Worse Than Satan's Imps.

A thief that would despoil a grave by stealing the flowers that loving hands had wet with tears and strewn above the honored dead, is too mean and too contemptible to live in a civilized community, where their presence contaminates and their breath destroys. There is a stench of these same polluted things in this Sacred City.—Salt Lake Mirror.

Don't go off half cocked. The man who stole the flowers might have done so to decorate the grave of his poor dead mother-in-law, being too poor to purchase the flowers himself, or he might have taken them to deck some poor lone editor's last resting place whom no one ever noticed.

William Thompson of Reno has sent a string of horses up to the Fair grounds to train. Thompson always keeps fast horses, but they don't ever seem quite fast enough for the other fellows' nags.

Cleveland is now regarded by the Democrats as a political wreck. Cleveland was anti-silver. Let Harrison take warning by the fate of his predecessor.

John Mackey has sued Ned Stokes for $353,000 money loaned.
